Would You Sign A Card To Save A Life?

George Morgan is seven years old, and he's been "waiting" for a long time. When you're seven years old, even a day can seem long, and "Cookie" George Morgan, as he is known to his friends, is waiting for kidney transplant. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Morgan, of Appomattox.

Both of his kidneys were removed in 1971 because of irreversible damage and deterioration. Since then he has been going at regular intervals to the dialysis room at the hospital of the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, George Morgan is living today because of a renal unit (kidney machine). These machines "flush out" waste from the body when the kidneys have been removed or are not functioning.

To survive, a patient must stay on the machine twice weekly for a period of 12-15 hours each visit.

One transplant was tried last year, but George's body rejected this, and he is dependent on the renal machine for life and health.

Dr. Fred Westervelt, head of the Renal Divison of the Dept. of Medicine at the University of Virginia, believes more people would be willing to donate kidneys and other vital organs at death, if they better understood what is involved.

"A prospective donor may fill out and sign a card stating specific organ or organs he wishes to donate," the doctor explains. Then, he keeps the card in his wallet so if he meets with sudden death, medical people will have access to the information that this individual is a donor." The doctor adds that donors should tell their friends and families of their decision, because in a time of crisis, someone may overlook the fact that a valuable organ is available to one in need.

Prospective donors and patients in need are matched and numerous hospitals along the entire Eastern seaboard cooperate with the U.Va. in matching donors to recipients.

Donation of eyes can restore sight to the blind; donation of the pituitary gland can help those suffering from a growth disturbance (example, Eddie Lewis, of Appomattox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Lewis.) And the donation of a kidney could help as sure long life and happiness to a seven year old who has been "waiting for a long time."

Among those most concerned about little George are his parents, of course, and his grandmother, Mrs. Helen Morgan, who has also cared for the boy during his time of difficulty and poor health.

The visitors of Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Wheeler Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Ben Wheeler, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Jones and family. Miss Mamie Cullop and Mrs. Thelma Martin. They are always welcomed visitors.

Mrs. Spence who has spent a week with her daughter and son-in-law, Rev. and Mrs. D. E. Moore went home Sunday. Rev. Moore and Kelly took her home and spent Sunday night. They came home Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carey E. Carson left Monday for a trip to visit their daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Garrett in Kansas. We wish for them a safe trip.
